epub download I am not trying to add the pdf file to the zip file, I am trying to get the pdf file into the zip file. A: You could use the FileUtils.copyFileAtomic(FileInputStream, FileOutputStream) method. ZipOutputStream out = new ZipOutputStream(new FileOutputStream(f.getAbsolutePath())); try { out.putNextEntry(new ZipEntry("test.pdf")); FileUtils.copyFileAtomic(new FileInputStream("some/pdf.pdf"), out); } finally { out.close(); } There are several issues with your code. When you read a file, you must either open it in a try-finally block or use a try-with-resources statement. You must ensure that the filename ends in a newline before you write the data. In your case you didn't have a newline at the end, so the file was written into the zip with no filename. I would recommend that you read the javadoc for these methods and see if they have any special notes on what to do if you pass a null reference to FileInputStream or FileOutputStream. Our treatment of corrosive burns has reached a level of sophistication which allows us to effectively manage these injuries without the need for massive resection of the burned area. We have consistently been the first and only center to successfully treat these injuries, whether by partial thickness burn or extensive chemical burn. Our first step in treatment is to remove the contaminated clothing of the patient. We must then remove the charred areas of skin in a specific manner in order to keep a "clean wound" and to maintain the epithelial regeneration of the burn. The larger the surface area of the burn, the more rapid is the need to stop the inflammatory cascade of the burn. In our opinion, aggressive management of these burns requires that we go beyond standard wound treatment techniques. The use of biosynthetic mesh covers and hyperbaric oxygen therapy are our methods of choice in managing the burn. Daily Cartoon Monday: Can You Decide Which "Super-Bowl" Is Hogg's Best?
